You can change as much or as little wording as you want, be sure to fill in the areas between parentheses () because they are spots where you will need to specify information related to your individual situation. When you're done customizing the document, use the toolbar commands to save, and then print. Making speech writing tips Even if this template can give you your head to start writing your own language, the final document will have to be adapted to your specific situation. The main tips to keep in mind are: Before you go to the awards ceremony, find out if the winner is expected to speak, and ask how much time a person is given to speak. This will help you determine how long your notes should be. Be a gracious winner, recognizing others who have been nominated for the award (if you have access to that information) and saying thank you to the award-winning organization and the individuals who helped you along the way with what it is for you to be recognized. Think carefully about what you need to admit when you submit your comments. It's much better to spend time in advance to make sure you add everyone, rather than apologizing for having left someone after that. Avoid encountering as arrogant. Instead, make sure you accept the award in a spirit of humility and gratitude. End up with a focus on the future, judging by what may come next to you, because you experience the honor of receiving the award. Accepting the award with a style sincere, quality acceptance speech will guarantee you to come across as a consummate professional who is humble and accomplished. Practice your comments carefully in advance and take your notes with you so that you can rely on them to present your language. Dear ladies and gentlemen! I'm honored to stand here today. I am sincerely grateful for this nomination and am pleased to receive the CEO of the Year award. I want to thank everyone who has worked with me to make this event happen. I clearly understand the scale of this project and this makes me even more proud of this achievement. I want to pay tribute to those more than two hundred global energy company executives who have been for this award. A particular tribute is my potential competitors, eight other finalists. They are all dedicated professionals who deserve this award, just like me. So I want to thank them because I'm really proud to be in the same queue. You know, this award is also special to me because I'm one of the few CEO winners from Asia. So, too, there are some national prides in turn. My company is an oil and gas company that invests in E&P, refining and petrochemical companies through related companies. Like most of you, being involved in a business that is one of the most important economic assets in the country, I am concerned about energy prices and energy security. Our country depends mainly on the import and export of oil and gas. In today's global economic crisis, it is very important to entrust the oil and gas business to professionals who will contribute to quality work and enthusiasm for the economy. Energy security is also a very important issue for which a specialist fee should be charged. The awards are one to highlight the best professionals in this field and thus help improve the overall economic situation in the country. Again, I greatly appreciate this candidacy, and I am delighted to be a part of it. Over the past decade, the CEO award has become a sign of excellence for the energy business. Every person involved in this field seeks an award. I am now one of the winners of the awards. I'm absolutely happy. Thanks! As a professional in a particular field, everyone's dream is to be recognized and rewarded for the exemplary work they do. Because it is a dream or purpose, people work hard to achieve it. So, through hard work, determination and perseverance, a number of people were nominated to receive the award. With this comes the responsibility or duty to prepare a speech when accepting the award, if ever it will be given to them. Much like actors and actresses always speak a language when they receive an Academy Award, professionals in different fields do the same. 31+ reward templates in Word | PSD | Google Docs | InDesign | Apple Pages | Publisher | Illustrator – START DOWNLOADING 6+ Speech Writing Examples pdf9+ inauguration language examples – PDF If you have been nominated for an award and you are sure that your chances of winning are high, or even if you are sure you win, it's only fair to prepare a speech when you get told the award. As English poet Samuel Taylor Coleridge said, He who is best prepared can best serve his moment of inspiration. Therefore, you should prepare the speech in advance, regardless of uncertainty, to avoid stuttering when accepting the award or to clearly shame yourself at such an important opportunity to say the wrong words. Outline of the award acceptance speechWhen you are, when the award, especially during prestigious events, you are likely to be given the language of acceptance of the award. As the title suggests, this is the language you say when you accept an award, and mainly for expressing how you will be granted such recognition. When writing a language, you should also know what information you should include. While there is no set standard for writing a language, here is an explanation for the outline of the award acceptance language:1. Opener This part of your language is basically your introduction. This will be your official opening, icebreaker or attention-grabber for your speech. The main purpose of this part is to show your excitement, shock and happiness to be awarded the award. This will also be your official recognition to the people attending the event. In some of the award-winning speeches that professionals have said in certain fields, here they insert a humorous quiz. For example, during the Oscars in 2010, Sandra Bullock, who won the Best Actress award, opened her speech with Did I really earn this or am I just wearing you all down? 2. Expression of gratitudeThis part of your speech you express gratitude for the organization or institution that gave you the award. While it can also be used to thank important people in your life, thanking the organization also expresses your respect for the body that gave you the award. In addition, this is also your way of talking about how grateful you are just for the nomination and how happy you are and honor that the deciding body has chosen you, despite all the talented nominees.3. Address your competitorIt is only true that you recognize the people who have been nominated along with you. This is the part of your speech where you talk well about your competition. Although they were your competitors for the award, some of them are your close acquaintances or friends and people you've been admiring for a long time. It's also your time to recognize how brilliant they have performed in their own right and how worthy they are of the nomination. You can also mention how these nominees have also served as your inspiration in creating your work. Through this, you strengthen your friendship with some of them and build new meaningful relationships with others.4. Sharing glory In this part of the speech you share your glory to the people who have always supported you. In addition to people's managers like talent scouts, directors, producers, managers, supervisors, etc. who have taken you the opportunity, it's also when you thank the most important people in your life as your spouse, parents, siblings, friends, mentors and so on. When the late Robin Williams received the best supporting actor in 1998. At the Oscars, he humorously thanked his late father by saying, I want to thank my father, there, the man who, when I said I wanted to be an actor, said, Amazing. Just have a backup profession like welding. 5. ConclusionThe your speech can be inspiring, funny, challenging, etc. You should really finish your speech with something you can remember. For example, you might challenge your audience, or you can leave an inspirational message that the audience can reflect on, or you can end up with witty, funny notes. To finish his award acceptance speech during the Mark Twain Comedy Award in 2011, actor-comedian Will Ferrell funny quipped in the theatrical band Now, you can play, now you can play music., as they interrupted it at the beginning of their speech. While some are going to deliver it extemporically, you can only prepare a basic outline of what you want to say, or a list of people you want to thank, so that no one forgets. However, when you have been given prior knowledge of the award, it is much better to devote time to actually writing it. So, here is a guide that you can specify when you write an award in the acceptance speech:1. Brainstorm ideasThis part of the process will be the basis or contour when you go along with the actual writing process. This will allow you to generate ideas about how you want your language to go and what you want to include in the language. In addition, this will allow you to gather inspiration that you can apply in your speech. List of reasons why you are grateful for receiving the award. List of all the people you want to thank in your speech. Name only the most important and thank others in general. Read or watch other acceptance languages to get inspiration.2. Write your languageThat you already have enough ideas and basically describe how your language should take place, you can now proceed to the actual writing process. The writing process should be easy enough, because the language should be short and more important, because you already have a guide. The following is a list of the entire writing process:Write a short introduction that will set the tone for all your language. Make sure you're trying to express gratitude and immediately contact the audience. You can also start your speech with a funny quip, but try to avoid sarcasm or joke about the merits of the award itself. In addition, the duration of your introduction will depend heavily on the time it takes for you to present the language. Move to your language body, focusing on the people you want to express gratitude to. This language should be dedicated to expressing your gratitude to the body that has given you the people you have allowed to show your talents, and all the people who have undoubtedly supported you. You can easily refer to the list of people you want to thank that you did in advance. Avoid thanking too many people. While this means expressing your gratitude, the audience will be easily bored if all you do is thank you all by one. This can also cause disappointment when you forgot to mention something. Carefully note that you are telling the platform. While this can be used to resolve certain disputes or social issues, be careful in doing so, because saying the wrong things whenever it means well can still be interpreted badly. End the speech in a positive note. Make sure you finish your speech lightly and positively in order to maintain the atmosphere and also make sure you took your chance in a good way. You have to make sure that your presentation is great, that the audience can clearly understand you and that your message can be heard loudly. Here are some tips on how you can present your award acceptance speech: Show your personality. The presentation of your language should be from the heart. It's good to sound surprised and shocked because he is just a man. With this, you should show your personality through the words you say and the actions or gestures you make. Be gracious. Gracious means recognising the good work your competitors have done and thanking the organization that selected you for the award. You show how benevolent you are, avoiding the tendency to become narcissistic; talk about others more thanks yourself. Show excitement. Showing your excitement doesn't mean you have to do baskets toward the stage, but you have to make sure that the audience can recognize that you are really happy to have won the award. You can show this in words or gestures. Some of them show visible signs of excitement, such as drying, heavy breathing, tears in the eye, etc. Be modest. It shouldn't be a self-congratulation, but sincere it can be. Show humility by avoiding talking more about you than other relevant and important people in your life. Practice, practice, practice. Yours should prepare, rehearse with the timer, memorize key people to thank and spend time unexpected.A.
